PATTERN

The sweater is worked from the top down. First the yoke is worked back and forth while the neckline is being shaped. After this the work is joined in the round. At the same time as the neckline is being shaped, increases are worked for the shoulders. When the shoulders have been completed, first increases are worked for the sleeves and then regular raglan increases are worked. At the same time the stripe pattern is started. When the yoke has been completed, the body and sleeves are finished separately. At the end, the neck rib is knitted on.
